Challenge Stigma / Find Peace

FrontlineFolks | Guide #13

Running on Empty: Chronic Sleep Debt

A Field Guide for Frontline Folks and Their Families

Chronic sleep debt erodes judgment long before you notice it.

By Michael Jenkins, MS, MSW, LCSW
Never Forgotten Services, PLLC

Disclaimer

This guide is for general education only.

It is not:

- Therapy
- Medical care
- A crisis service
- Individualized advice

Reading this guide does not create a therapist–client relationship with the author or with Never Forgotten Services, PLLC.

If you are in crisis or thinking about harming yourself or someone else, call 988 in the United States, go to your nearest emergency room, or contact your local emergency services.

If you want mental health treatment, please contact a licensed provider in your state or call the number on the back of your insurance card.

Table of Contents

1. Sleep Debt Is a Performance Injury
2. Why Frontline Schedules Break Recovery
3. A Realistic Sleep Recovery Protocol
4. Family Agreements That Protect Sleep
5. When to Evaluate Apnea, Insomnia, or Burnout
6. 7-Day Sleep Debt Reset
7. Worksheets
    - Worksheet 1: Worksheet: Running on Empty - Sleep Debt Recovery Plan
    - Worksheet 2: Worksheet: Running on Empty - Household Sleep Agreement

1. Sleep Debt Is a Performance Injury

Chronic sleep debt is not just feeling tired. It is cumulative neurological load that reduces reaction time, emotional control, and decision quality.

Operational costs

- More preventable mistakes
- Faster irritability and conflict
- Lower pain tolerance and higher inflammation
- Stronger cravings for sugar, caffeine, and alcohol

2. Why Frontline Schedules Break Recovery

The issue is not only hours slept. It is rhythm disruption. Rotating shifts, adrenaline carryover, and inconsistent wake times fragment the recovery cycle.

- Shift rotation misaligns circadian timing
- Late caffeine delays sleep pressure
- Alcohol helps sleep onset but worsens sleep quality
- Phone and TV light suppresses melatonin

3. A Realistic Sleep Recovery Protocol

1. Anchor wake time: keep it consistent within a practical range, even after rough nights.
2. Build a short wind-down: 20 minutes of low light, low input, and no work decisions.
3. Time caffeine aggressively: cut intake at least 8 hours before intended sleep.
4. Use tactical naps: 10-30 minutes when needed, but avoid late naps that steal nighttime sleep.

4. Family Agreements That Protect Sleep

- Define one protected sleep block as non-negotiable.
- Set household noise and interruption rules during recovery windows.
- Use a simple sign or message for do-not-disturb periods.
- Schedule connection time after recovery to prevent resentment.

---

5. When to Evaluate Apnea, Insomnia, or Burnout

- Loud snoring, witnessed pauses, or morning headaches
- Regular 3 a.m. wakeups with inability to return to sleep
- Dependence on alcohol or sedatives to initiate sleep
- Persistent daytime impairment despite sleep effort

6. 7-Day Sleep Debt Reset

Track wake time, caffeine cutoff, pre-sleep routine, and next-day function for one week. Focus on consistency, not perfection.

> Daily target:
> One fixed wake anchor.
> One wind-down block.
> One behavior that protects tomorrow's energy.

Worksheet 1: Worksheet: Running on Empty - Sleep Debt Recovery Plan

Use this to connect sleep behaviors with next-day performance and mood.

What sleep disruptors showed up this week?

Late caffeine, shift changes, alcohol, rumination, screens, pain, nightmares.

What did poor sleep cost you the next day?

Reaction time, patience, pain, attention, errors, conflict.

What two sleep-protection actions are non-negotiable this week?

Pick realistic actions you can repeat even on hard shifts.

1. Wake anchor used:

What time did you wake and how consistent was it?

2. Caffeine cutoff:

What time was your last caffeine intake?

3. Wind-down quality:

What did you do in the last 20-30 minutes before bed?

4. Next-day function score (1-10):

Rate energy, focus, and emotional control.

> Treat sleep as mission-critical maintenance, not optional recovery.

Worksheet 2: Worksheet: Running on Empty - Household Sleep Agreement

Use this with your household to protect one daily recovery block without creating resentment.

Protected sleep block

What specific time window is protected this week?

Do-not-disturb rules

List noise, phone, and interruption boundaries during the block.

Post-recovery reconnection plan

How and when will you reconnect so family does not feel shut out?

1. Sleep-protection signal:

What phrase or sign means recovery block is active?

2. Backup plan if schedule changes:

What alternate recovery window will you use?

3. Weekly review question:

Did this plan improve mood, patience, and function?

> Sleep plans work when they are visible, specific, and shared.

Closing

You cannot out-tough chronic sleep debt. It will eventually tax your health, your patience, and your judgment.

Protecting sleep is not selfish. It is how you stay effective for the people who depend on you.

About the Author

Michael Jenkins, MS, MSW, LCSW

Founder, Never Forgotten Services, PLLC

Michael is a U.S. Army combat veteran and licensed clinical social worker who specializes in working with military, veterans, and first responders—our frontline folks. After leaving the military, he spent years fighting his own demons and trying to figure out why he could hold it together on the job but feel completely wrecked at home. The turning point was realizing he wasn't the only one living that split life—and that nobody should have to feel that alone, confused, or broken by what the job asks of them.

Since then, his work has focused on trauma, the impact of high-stress jobs on home life, and helping families make sense of what the job brings home. He uses plain language, zero shame, and a "you're not crazy, this actually makes sense" approach to help frontline folks and their families understand what's happening in their nervous systems and learn how to move through the chaos together.